No - I'm not going to do a contents for just two sides!!

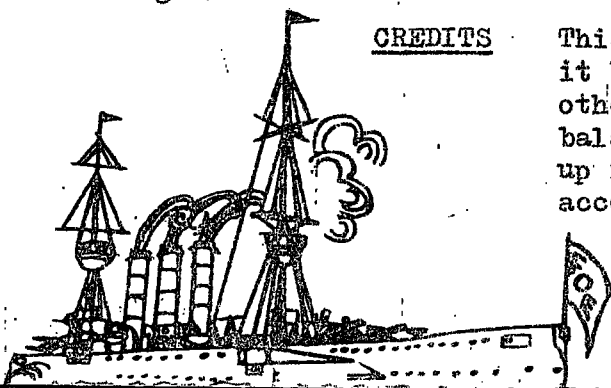

EDITORIAL

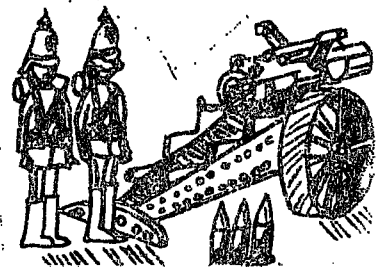

Welcome to the ninetieth issue of Fall of Eagles - a pale shadow of the 89 forerunners. This is the first photocopied issue since issue 8. It is the smallest issue since issue 1, and it has the smallest circulation ever. Only six of you are receiving copies, I wonder if it will have a rarity value in the years to come? The recipients are the four remaining players in the FOE 48, Richard Walkerdine for the archives, and one lone subscriber in Steve Jones who has expressed his willingness to receive the single sheet FOE 48 reports.

You'll see from above that I have set a deadline of March 6th - a normal 4 week deadline. However, as it seems very likely indeed that the game will end next season, I intend adjudicating as soon as I receive 4 sets of orders - and bear in mind that I have two sets of standing orders for that game. If the game does not end then you will hear as soon as possible (ie after I have 4 sets of orders, or after the deadline has passed). If it does end then don't worry if you don't hear from me for a few weeks. I intend putting out a reasonable length last issue of FOE including the FOE 48 final season and game-end report among other things.

CREDITS

This issue is costing just 17p to those receiving it by 1st class post (ie players in FOE 48). The others pay 14p, and RJW gets it free! Your credit balance is shown below. Please top up if less than 17p or I won't accept next orders.

EYRIE

The 4-way draw has once again been defeated, there were 3 votes in favour and 1 vote against. Not surprisingly the 4-way draw has been re-proposed so votes on this once again with orders for next season.

As you are all aware, I am very loathe to interfere in games and try my hardest not to influence the result. However, there has been some correspondence on this game (including one letter marked not for publication) and I feel that I should make my views known. Please don't feel that I am trying to end this game so that I can fold the zine - it's just that I can see no real point in further play.

I hope that Niall will forgive me for publishing a part of his "not for publication" letter. He writes "...I shall await until the allies are in position - with no retreats or builds needed to be ordered - before accepting what appears to be the inevitable". With the German unit now having returned to Ber I submit that the stalemate line is solid. I have on file standing orders from both England and France holding the line, and I'm sure that Germany will not have to think very hard to find the orders to hold the centre of the line.

So I would ask Niall to honour the statement he made in his letter "and accept the inevitable".

I hope I haven't offended anybody and I would ask you all to send your game-end statements along with next season's orders if you voting in favour of the proposal. As I already have orders and votes on file from John and Tony, your statements would also be appreciated.
